Talking with the hands

What do you need for this game?

Short story, a pair as of players, one will be narrator and the other one will be the actor with the hands

Participants: the whole group

Language aims

Development of listening and speaking skills, attention, and concentration.

First, the teacher prepares a short story for students.

Then, the teacher decides who will be the narrator and who want to be his/ her hands. The narrator keeps his hands behind. Another student hugging the narrator from behind stretches out his hands which become the narrator's hands.

While the narrator tells/reads the given short story the second student gestures and tries to act out events, characters and situations with his hands.

When the first pair finishes another pair from the group take their place. They can use the same story or a new one.
